| Title: | The Many Faces of Hong Kong | | |

| Caption: | A pseudo speeding tram caught rolling through the bustling Central district in the multi-faced city of Hong Kong | | |
| Commentary: | What intrigued me about this tram was its livery. In our modern city, a tram was a magical combination in which it could represent the many faces of our home, Hong Kong. Many think that Hong Kong, as an international city, would be a city full of modern buses, buildings and rail systems, packed with many businessmen and businesswomen strolling down in their profound suits. That, I believe is one face of the city we live in. Another is the colonial styled transports that still exist in our vicinity, which many use every day. Hong Kong operates the world's largest existing fleet of trams, and is something that we should be proud of. The many faces on the tram also remind us of the final appearance of Hong Kong, unmistakable Chinese tradition. In which I am reminded that there is a traditional act where the performer quickly changes masks, which relates to the traditional market places that makes our city distinctive in the minds of others. Thus, I have chosen this picture, to represent the elements of the city that belong to its unique people. | | |
