“What is love?” Does true love refer to the love when one is adorable? Does true love mean loving the others when he or she is charming? Is true love telling you only to admire someone when he or she is fabulous? Absolutely and totally NOT! Love is to unconditionally devote and sacrifice oneself to accomplish others’ desire. Love is to accept others’ incompleteness, faultiness and defectiveness. In our snapshot, the lady who is pushing the wheelchair up the path shows her love for the elderly. Although its energy consumption is high, and her spirits are worn out, she still tries to fulfill the disabled’s desire to look around and feel the majestic, splendid nature. In fact, there are many people in the world who are as lonely and miserable as this old lady. Does anyone ever care and concern about them? In the world of darkness, there’s still love in the corner. People’s help is needed to contribute more love to the weak. Everyone can make great inspiration and contribution. If you try to care and be concerned about the needs of others around you, you would have the ability to make it a better place with no tears and no discrimination. With love and sympathy, a little action can be tremendously effective.
